An Economic History of Rome

TO THE END OF THE REPUBLIC

By TENNEY FRANK

Professor of Latin in the Johns Hopkins University

310 pp. Cloth, $2.50.

As a study of the economic development of the city of Rome, the governing centre of the civilized world, it stands alone in its completeness, in the thorough use which the author has made of available evidence, in the sound judgment which he has shown, and in the clear, convincing way in which he has set forth his conclusions.

Professor FRANK FROST ABBOTT, in The American Historical Review.
